

WAYNE MORSE CENTER FOR LAW AND POLITICS

Tribes as Trustees Again:
The Emerging Tribal Role in the Conservation Trust Movement

Purpose: This one-day working symposium will convene tribal leaders and staff, government officials, and land trust professionals to provide input and perspectives on the emerging tribal role in the conservation trust movement. Professor Wood is inviting workshop participants from a variety of institutions and settings with the purpose of bringing experience and perspective relevant to the emerging models of ownership and conservation. For information, contact Margaret Hallock at (541) 346-3699 or see www.waynemorsecenter.uoregon.edu.

Date: Friday, April 6, 2007

Where: University of Oregon Many Nations Longhouse and Lewis Lounge.
The Longhouse is located at 16th and Columbia, Eugene, just east of the Knight Law Center. Parking permits will be available at the Longhouse.

Agenda:

At Longhouse:

- 9:00 a.m. Breakfast (provided) and Introductions
- 10:00 a.m. Presentation of paper and reactions to three emerging models of tribal participation in the conservation trust movement
- Noon Lunch (provided)

At Lewis Lounge, 4th Floor of Knight School of Law:

- 1:00 p.m. Discussion round tables comparing models based on six parameters:
Opportunities for Conservation
Funding Potential
Legal Mechanisms for Permanent Protection
Tribal Land and Resource Management
Tribal Use and Enjoyment of Resources
Enforcement

There will be a break with snacks provided in the afternoon session.

- 4:00 p.m. Professor Wood Summary and Adjourn